

Center for Diabetes Translation Research Request for Applications

The Washington University Center for Diabetes Translation Research (CDTR) is soliciting applications for its seventh round of Pilot & Feasibility grants. Projects should be for translation research, preferably T3 or T4; and in the area of diabetes, prediabetes/metabolic syndrome, or obesity prevention or treatment in order to be considered responsive to this RFA. T3 research is translating clinical findings into everyday practice in real world settings; T4 research explores testing and implementing solutions at a population level.

The Center will award up to six, one-year pilots, for up to $20,000. Pilots do not provide money for indirect costs. Applications are due by September 1, 2017, and should include a summary of the proposed project including: A) Specific Aim(s), B) Significance, C) Innovation, and D) Approach/Research Design and Methods. Together, these sections should be no more than 5 pages using Arial 11-point font and ½" margins. Please be sure to include a discussion of 1) how this research is translational and 2) how you plan to use the core/s of the CDTR.

In addition, not included in the 5 pages outlined above, please include the following with your application:

1. A bibliography with references to support your submission;
2. The appropriate sections related to human subjects (if applicable);
3. A detailed budget and budget justification;
4. Biosketches for all key personnel;
5. Letters of support from any collaborators not listed as key personnel.

The CDTR will be hosting an informational webinar on July 10 and all members are invited (details to follow).

Although letters of intent (LOI) are not required, CDTR leadership is willing to provide feedback and guidance on any LOIs submitted by August 1, 2017.

The projected start date for projects is January 1, 2018.

Eligibility: In order to qualify for CDTR pilot funding, Principal Investigators must be members, or eligible for membership, of the CDTR. Additional criteria for membership is available on our website cdtr.wustl.edu.

Applications and questions should be directed to: Jenn Gallagher at jhultz@wustl.edu.
